FOREWORD

The Kenya Government has always recognised the importance of Labour Market Information (LMI) in regard to employment planning, policy development and facilitation of mobility within the country and across borders.

The Kenya National Occupational Classification Standard (KNOCS) is the Ministry of Labour and Human Resource Development's response to a perennial need for a document that defines and/or classifies all the occupations found within the country. KNOCS – 2000 is making history as the first published document that defines occupations as they are found in Kenya today.

In this era of globalization, changing technology and business practices, shifts in the demand for our goods and services will continue to shape Kenya's labour market. This will in turn call for comprehensive, up-to-date and reliable information on the labour market. Specifically, occupational information will: -

1. Sort jobs and persons into occupations to produce statistics on the occupational description of employed and unemployed persons, wages, working conditions and occupational injuries, etc;
2. Avail Policy makers and administrators occupational definitions which will enable them understand, implement and monitor the effect of economic and social policies;
3. Give researchers and the general public occupational classifications to enable them analyse, describe and gain knowledge on what is happening in their country;
4. Provide immigration authorities with information to facilitate decision making on issuance of work permits;
5. Enable employment services to sort persons and jobs to match job seekers and vacancies;
6. Facilitate managers of enterprises/organisations to sort jobs and persons and manage wage and other personnel policies, as well as monitor working conditions;
7. Provide school-leavers and job seekers with information on various types of work, training requirements, career prospects and working conditions;
8. Provide career masters and vocational counsellors with information to appropriately advise school-leavers and job seekers on the job market;
9. Give vocational training specialists a basis for planning and designing vocational training programmes;
10. Provide Kenyans with information on labour activities classified by occupations.

In 2002, this Ministry launched the Productivity Centre of Kenya as one way of stimulating economic growth. The Centre would be rendered ineffective in the absence of information on the various economic activities that Kenyans are involved in.

It is therefore my conviction, that KNOCS – 2000 Edition and subsequent versions will go a long way in bridging observed gaps in labour market information.

Finally, it is my earnest hope that this uniquely compiled document, the first of its kind for the Kenyan labour market, will answer the quest for information on careers and jobs in the Labour Market.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This edition of the Kenya National Occupational Classification Standard (KNOCS) replaces earlier versions prepared by the Ministry of Labour and Human Resource Development.

The initial attempt by the Kenya Government to establish a National Occupational Classification System (NOCS) was made in 1976 through the Kenyanisation of Personnel Bureau (KPB). Over the years the classification has had to be revised several times for use in manpower studies, including the 1982/83 and 1986/88 national manpower surveys. These revisions have normally been carried out jointly with the Ministry of Labour, the Central Bureau of Statistics (CBS) and the National Manpower Development Committee (NMDC) members.

KNOCS – 2000 has been developed with the aim of providing a system for classifying and aggregating occupational information obtained from manpower surveys, employment services, other statistical surveys as well as available administrative records.

The compilation of KNOCS-2000 was made possible through the effort, devotion and dedication of several staff of the Department of Human Resource Management and Employment; in particular Messrs Y.O. Audo (retired), J.M. Kavuludi, F.K.Chege, J.K. Manyara, R.U.Yara, E.O. Ogutu and T.A. Nyamita. The exercise would have been impossible without the expert advice of members of the National Manpower Development Committee and other stakeholders. The International Labour Organisation (ILO), specifically Messrs E. Hoffmann and R. Knop provided invaluable technical support as well as equipment and facilities for the KNOCS work. I extend special appreciation to each and all.

Last but not least, I thank all the staff of the Ministry who contributed in one way or the other to the successful completion of the task.

INTRODUCTION

The development of a Kenya National Occupational Classification Standard (KNOCS) provides among other things an essential tool for assessing the current levels of manpower in the economy.

The first attempt by the Kenya Government to establish a national occupational classification system was made in 1976 through the defunct Kenyanisation of Personnel Bureau (KPB) as a tool for carrying out manpower inventory. It was largely used for collection of labour market information at the employment exchanges. Since then the classification has been revised several times for use in various studies including the 1982/83 and 1986/88 National Manpower Surveys. These revisions have been carried out as joint efforts of the Ministry of Labour, the Central Bureau of Statistics (CBS) and the National Manpower Development Committee Secretariat currently in the Ministry of Labour and Human Resource Development .

The Kenya National Occupational Classification Standard provides a system for classifying and aggregating occupational information obtained from manpower surveys, employment services and other statistical surveys as well as administrative records.

This version of the Kenya National Occupational Classification Standard (KNOCS) is the culmination of an exercise which was started immediately after publication of the report of the National Manpower Survey 1986/88. The survey report recommended that improvements be carried out on the KNOCS used during the exercise, after it was observed that it had a number of noticeable shortcomings. KNOCS - 2000 is therefore a restructured and up-dated/improved version of KNOCS - 86 which in turn was an expanded version of the one used during the 1982 Manpower Survey.

Throughout the compilation of KNOCS - 2000 there was conscious effort to make the document to conform as closely as possible to the International Standard Classification of Occupations (ISCO) -1988 for purposes of international comparisons.

THE KNOCS MISSION

The primary mission of the KNOCS has been to establish a comprehensive system for classifying occupational information for effective human resource management in the country.

OBJECTIVES OF THE KNOCS

KNOCS - 2000 has five main objectives, namely:

- (a) to facilitate the collection of comprehensive occupational information for statistical purposes.
- (b) to facilitate the assessment of the Kenyan manpower structure and labour market information as well as for the planning of human resource development in the country. This includes providing a rational basis for manpower inventory and efforts to match the skills output from the training/education system with jobs so that institutional planners can ensure that training programmes become responsive to labour market demands.

- (c) to assist those organisations involved in job placement and other employment services (manpower utilisation).
- (d) to assist those Kenyans wishing to make career choices.
- (e) to facilitate cross-border occupational comparisons brought about by the need by countries to export labour and to form various regional economic associations which have made the labour market to become international in outlook.

CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK

The conceptual framework adopted during the design and construction of KNOCS - 2000, was largely the same one used for ISCO - 88.

Thus the kind of work performed or job and skill have been the two concepts followed during the work on KNOCS - 2000.

An occupation has been defined as a set of jobs which have the same main tasks and duties.

A job has been defined as a set of tasks or duties executed or meant to be executed (in the case of unfilled jobs), by one person.

Skill is defined as the ability to carry out the tasks and duties of a given job. It has two dimensions for purposes of KNOCS - 2000.

- (a) Skill level which is a function of the complexity and range of the tasks and duties involved; and
- (b) Skill specialisation which is defined by the field of knowledge required, the tools and machinery used, the materials worked on or with, as well as the kinds of goods and services produced.

Occupational groups classified by KNOCS - 2000 were delineated and aggregated on the basis of this skill concept.

For purposes of KNOCS - 2000 five skill levels have been defined based on the Kenyan education/training system. The use of these educational categories to define the KNOCS skill levels does not imply the skills necessary to perform the tasks and duties of a given job can be acquired only through formal education. The skills may be, and often are, acquired through informal training and experience. Furthermore, the emphasis in KNOCS - 2000 is on skills required to carry out the tasks and duties of an occupation and not on whether a worker is more or less skilled than another worker in the same occupation.

As a rule, therefore, the operational definitions of the five KNOCS - 2000 skill levels listed below apply where the necessary occupational skills are acquired through formal education or vocational training.

- (a) The first KNOCS skill level has been defined as primary education. This is education which generally begins at the age of about 6 years and lasts 8 years in the present 8-4-4 education system or 7/8 years in the previous 7/8-4-2-3 system leading to a certificate of primary education. This may be followed by a period of on-the-job training.
- (b) The second KNOCS skill level has been defined as post-primary education (except secondary and tertiary education) which starts after primary education and lasts about 2 years leading to artisan level certificates. Emphasis at this skill level is on vocational training.
- (c) The third KNOCS skill level has been defined as secondary education which begins at the age of about 14 years and lasts 4 years leading to a certificate of secondary education. This may be followed by a period of on-the-job training.
- (d) The fourth KNOCS skill level has been defined as post-secondary education (excluding university). This is education which begins after secondary education and lasts about 3 years and leads to an award of Certificate or Diploma but not equivalent to a first university degree.
- (e) The fifth KNOCS skill level has been defined as education which begins after secondary education, last about 4, 5 or more years and leads to a university or postgraduate university degree or the equivalent.

DESIGN AND STRUCTURE

The design and structure of KNOCS - 2000 has mostly been adopted or modified from ISCO - 88. The main departure from ISCO - 88 is in the level of aggregation of the occupational groups. Thus while KNOCS - 2000 has the same 10 major groups at the top level of aggregation as ISCO -88, they are sub-divided into 54 sub-major groups, 225 minor groups and 1192 occupational titles. The following is a tabular presentation of the classification including the KNOCS skill level.

Major groups 1 - Legislators, administrators and managers and 0 - Armed forces have not been linked to any skill level. This is because occupations in these two major groups require skills which are diverse to an extent that it was not possible to link them with any of the five broad KNOCS - 2000 skill levels stated above. The armed forces have not been included in the coverage during manpower surveys for security reasons.

The first minor group under the major group of Legislators, Administrators and Managers i.e. Legislative and Constitutional Officials (KNOCS 111) has some features which made it to be treated a bit differently from the rest. It is of special interest to Kenyans as it describes workers whose duties have been incorporated into the constitution of the country. They hold constitutional offices.

One possibility we cannot rule out is the presence in KNOCS-2000, of a few occupations which appear unlikely to be found within the country. Over the years many people have worked on KNOCS and it was found safer to retain most of the information while further studies are carried out. For example, one may not be aware of glass lens moulding (KNOCS 732-15) in the country but one cannot also rule out people taking up the occupation in the near future.

Each of the four levels of aggregation of KNOCS - 2000 has been allocated a code number. Brief descriptions have also been given to all the four levels.

CLASSIFICATION STRUCTURE

The structure of the Kenya National Occupational Classification Standard (KNOCS) is designed mainly to facilitate statistical description and analysis of labour market information and other socio-economic activities. It also helps in the formulation of government policies, including manpower planning, utilization and vocational training policies. The current version, which is in line with the ILO-International Standard Classification of Occupations ISCO-1988 version, concentrates mainly on the definition and description of occupational titles. The definitions in the 1986 version of KNOCS were quite limited and therefore needed further refinement. In the current version of KNOCS, attempt has been made to give clear descriptions of the work usually performed by those who belong to the occupation. Precise explanations of how and why the work is done and what is involved in the process, have also been given in most cases. The general functions of some occupations are followed by an enumeration of the main tasks performed, wherever possible.

The document (KNOCS) is structured on a 5-digit coding system. The 5-digit coding system is such that the first and second digits of the code refer to the major and sub-major occupational groups, respectively. The third digit refers to the minor group, while the fourth and fifth digits refer to the occupational titles. The document is categorized into 10 major groups, 54 sub-major groups, 225 minor groups and reflects 1192 occupational titles.

Given below are brief outlines of KNOCS major groups which are meant to facilitate the interpretation of the classification.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES

1. Occupations with a broad range of tasks and duties.

Depending on the size of an establishment, differences in the range of tasks and duties for the 'same occupation' are likely to be observed. For example, one visiting a small establishment is likely to find that typing, filing, telephone and reception work are performed by the same worker. In bigger establishments those are likely to be two, three or four separate jobs. Since an occupation classification depends on the most common combination of tasks and duties, there will be a problem when in the case of some occupations, the range of tasks and duties does not correspond to those specified in the classification. The following rules are suggested in such cases:

- (a) If the tasks and duties performed require skills usually obtained through different levels of training and experience, the jobs have been classified in accordance with those tasks and duties which require the highest level of skills. For example, if the job involves driving a van,(KNOCS 882-13) and delivering mail (KNOCS 915-11 ),it has been classified under KNOCS 882-13. This is not similar to jobs like Driver Mechanic where the employer is essentially looking for a driver who is capable of performing certain maintenance tasks on the vehicle.
- (b) If the tasks and duties require different skills acquired through similar levels of skills, the jobs have been classified in accordance with the minimum requirements for one to perform the job. For example the job of Finance and Administration Manager has been classified under Finance Manager (KNOCS 132-13) as financial management skills are normally the minimum requirement for the job.
- (c) If the tasks and duties are connected with different stages of the production and distribution of goods process, tasks and duties related to the production stage have taken priority over associated ones - unless one of the tasks and duties predominates. For example a baker who bakes bread, makes pastries and sells these products has been classified as a baker(KNOCS 752-11) and not as a shop sales person (KNOCS 512-11).

1038518416. Market oriented versus subsistence farming.

Economic development within the country has not been uniform and this has led to the coexistence of two agricultural sectors. One is characterized by low-skilled subsistence farming (including pastoralists) while the other is market oriented and is highly mechanized. Under Major Group 6 - Skilled Farm, Fishery, Wildlife and Related Workers, KNOCS has made a distinction between the two sectors i.e 61 and 62 for market oriented agricultural workers and 63 for subsistence agricultural and fishery workers.

1038518417. Occupations in the informal sector.

The informal sector has become a major employer in the country. Occupations in this sector were therefore considered when compiling KNOCS. Most of the occupations in the informal sector are to be found in the two KNOCS major groups of 7-Craft and Related Trades Workers and 9-Elementary Occupations. For example, since handicraft making is an important activity in the country, it has been given prominence in KNOCS under minor group 733-Handicraft Workers. Other examples of occupations in the informal sector are; Street Vendors and Related Workers (KNOCS-911) and Shoe Cleaning and Other Street Services Elementary Occupations (KNOCS-912).

1038518418. Working proprietor

KNOCS does not classify the status of employment. It considers the occupation based on tasks performed.

1038518419. Quality inspecting occupations

Quality inspecting occupations, whose main tasks are to ensure compliance with the quality standards and specifications of manufacturers have been classified under Minor group 398- Safety, Health and Quality Inspectors/Controllers. Testers and checkers, whose main tasks consist of a mechanical inspection of the goods produced which, in most cases, amounts to simple visual checking have been classified with workers producing these goods.

1038518420. Supervising occupations

Supervising occupations (including those of foreman/woman, overseer, charge-hand and headman) which are mainly concerned with the control of the quality of the work done have been classified together with the jobs whose tasks they supervise. However, if the main tasks and duties of a job consist of planning, organizing, controlling and directing the daily work activities of a group of subordinate workers, the occupation should be considered as a managerial occupation and classified in the appropriate group under Sub-major Group 14, Non-departmental Managers.

1038518421. Coaching occupations

Coaching occupations primarily concerned with on-the-job training by continuous observation, assessment and guidance are classified with the occupations for which instruction is carried out in particular trade, craft or machine-operating tasks,

1038518422. Apprentices and trainees

Apprentices and trainees are classified according to the tasks and duties actually performed and not according to their future occupation.
